Collection Summary

Creator: Bernstein, Leonard, 1918-1990

Title: Papers

Dates: 1900-1990, bulk 1933-1990

Extent: 350,000 items

Repository: Library of Congress, Music Division,

The finding aid for the Leonard Bernstein Collection in the Music Division of the Library of Congress is intended to help researchers identify and locate materials in this large and complex collection. Estimated at containing somewhere between 400 and 500 thousand items, both the collection and the finding aid are being organized broadly into series and then into more refined subseries. Although this finding aid is more detailed than most, it is not to be construed as an item level record. For instance, although the Personal Correspondence lists the number of items in each correspondent's folder, there may be other correspondence from these same people in the Personal Business Papers, Writings, or even the Fan Mail series'. In addition, certain items of correspondence may relate to the person whose folder it is in, but be neither from or to that individual. Rather than having one Introduction, as do most of our finding aids, we have created an introduction to each series and/or subseries to provide more detailed information about the organization and content of that series; and in the case of the Photographs, we have also created two Indexes. Both the finding aid and the collection itself are currently to be considered works in progress. Rather than wait until the entire collection is processed before making it generally available to researchers--our usual practice--we have decided to make each series available as it is completed; the music will be the last series in the collection to be processed.

Language: Collection material in English

Introduction

Beginning in 1953, and continuing until 1967, Leonard Bernstein gave many of his most significant music manuscripts to the Library of Congress, including: The Age of Anxiety, Symphony No. 2, Candide, Chichester Psalms, Fancy Free, Jeremiah, Symphony No. 1, On the Waterfront, Prelude, Fugue and Riffs, Serenade (after Plato's "Symposium"), Trouble in Tahiti, West Side Story and Wonderful Town. Between 1965 and 1983, Bernstein gave 104 scrapbooks to the Library (five additional scrapbooks were given by Brandeis University in 1973).

Helen Coates, Bernstein's longtime friend and secretary, left 94 letters, music manuscripts and other Bernstein related items to the Library in her will. The Library received the items in 1991. An additional 600 letters, which had been in the possession of Helen Coates, were also given to the Library by the Springate Corporation in 1991.

In 1993, the Springate Corporation, representatives of the Bernstein estate, increased the size of the Bernstein Collection many times over by giving to the Library hundreds of thousands of additional items. This included, not only additional music manuscripts, but correspondence, writings of all types, photographs, commercial and non-commercial recordings and audio-visual materials (now housed in the Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division,) business papers, programs, fan mail, date books, realia, and other less common items. In addition to Bernstein's personal business papers, the extensive archives for his corporate identity, Amberson Inc., were also part of the gift.

In 1997, Burton Bernstein, brother of Leonard Bernstein, gave the Library ninety-five additional items to add to the Bernstein Collection. Originally from Jennie Bernstein's apartment, and consisting primarily of letters to their parents; including fifty-two from Leonard Bernstein, one from Felicia Bernstein, one from Aaron Copland and four from Helen Coates.

The contents of the Leonard Bernstein Collection is available for examination and study in the Performing Arts Reading Room. Materials in this collection may not be copied without the written permission of the copyright owner --usually the author or his or her heirs. The user is advised that permission to copy may not imply permission for other uses, including performing, recording and publishing. Consult a Reference Librarian in the Music Division for further permission information. As of this writing, requests for permission to copy music, prose and letters written by Leonard Bernstein should be directed to Marie Carter, Vice President of Licensing and Royalties, Amberson Inc., 25 Central Park West, Suite 1Y, New York, NY 10023, FAX (212) 315-0643. Ms. Carter will also forward to the appropriate parties requests to copy letters written by Felicia Bernstein, Sam Bernstein, Jennie Bernstein, Jamie Bernstein Thomas, Alexander Bernstein, and Nina Bernstein.

Scope and Content Note

The Leonard Bernstein Collection is as exceptional a collection as its namesake would suggest. Bernstein, arguably the most prominent figure in American classical music this century, made his impact as a conductor, composer of classical and theater music, and as an educator through his books, conducting students at Tanglewood, and, especially, his various televised lecture series that helped define the potentials of that medium.

Bernstein came to national prominence virtually overnight with his last minute conducting debut with the New York Philharmonic, substituting for Bruno Walter on November 14, 1943. He was twenty-five. Because Bernstein was a national figure from the very beginning of his career, and because his friend and teacher, Helen Coates, became his secretary and "preserver of the flame" beginning in 1944, the Bernstein Collection is not only amazingly complete, but much of it is annotated by Miss Coates to an extraordinary degree. These factors combine to make the Leonard Bernstein Collection one of the most exceptional in the music division in the variety and scope of material it contains.

Both this finding aid and the collection itself are currently to be considered works in progress. Rather than wait until the entire collection is processed before making it generally available to researchers--our usual practice--we have decided to make each "series" available as it is completed. For access to the "un-processed" materials in the collection, written requests should be addressed to Head, Acquisitions and Processing Section, Music Division, Library of Congress, Washington DC 20540-4710.

As each series is completed, an introduction to that material will be added at the beginning of the content list to that series. Because much of the music in the Bernstein Collection is being held in New York until new, or, in some cases, initial publications, we have decided that the music will be the last series in the collection to be processed.

Series
Correspondence, 1932-90

The correspondence in the Leonard Bernstein Collection consists of more than 15,500 individual items from over 3,300 individuals or organizations. All material from or relating to a correspondent is housed in its own folder(s) and arranged chronologically. Undated material is filed at the back. Each identifiable correspondent is indexed alphabetically in the guide along with the date range and the number of items in the folder(s). Unidentified correspondence is at the end. Most of the correspondence falls between the dates of 1932, the year of Bernstein's engagement of Helen Grace Coates as piano teacher at the age of 14, and 1990, the year of his death.

In addition to such standard items as letters, postcards, telegrams, and birthday and greeting cards, the correspondence also contains the occasional photograph, music manuscript, diary, appointment book, script, collection of poems, or art work (e.g., sketches). No attempt was made to indicate all the non-standard items where they occur, but on occasion a parenthetical note will be found regarding such novelties.

Most of Bernstein's individual correspondents are filed under their own names. However, a few are organizational or business names, and other letters are topic-related, i.e. Candide. These designations pre-date the Library of Congress Music Division's possession of the material. Some letters from prominent individuals were moved from the "fan mail" collection to "correspondence" prior to the presentation of the collection to the Library.

A significant amount of the correspondence includes Bernstein's responses to the letters he received. These typically appear in the form of handwritten or typed replies in the margins or on the backs of the letters received by Bernstein. The handwritten responses are either in LB's hand or that of Helen Coates in her capacity as secretary. There is no indication in this guide where such responses occur. In some cases, however, Bernstein's actual outgoing letters --either originals, or photocopies --are present, either filed chronologically within the correspondence, or collected separately in their own folder. In both instances, parenthetical notes indicate the filing method (for example, Burton Bernstein, Felicia Bernstein, Helen Coates, Serge Koussevitzky). After Bernstein's death, Charlie Harmon and Harry Kraut contacted people likely to have received letters from Bernstein and requested photocopies of that correspondence. These photocopies are filed at the end of each correspondent's folder. The only clue to the location of these items in the correspondence is found by noting the date spans--as these items were solicited via a letter dated post-1990 (also included)--most date spans which exceed 1990 indicate the presence of photocopied Bernstein correspondence.

In addition, the Library included two other sets of material in the Correspondence: over 300 condolence letters sent to Bernstein after the death of his father, referenced under Bernstein, Samuel J.; and over 700 letters, referenced under Coates, Helen, primarily from Bernstein to Coates, but also from various other persons to Coates, from Coates to Bernstein, and from Bernstein to several other persons. In the case of Helen Coates, each of the correspondents found in her file is listed parenthetically following her name in the guide with cross-references listed under the correspondent. For Samuel Bernstein's condolence letters, no cross references are provided.

Many other series in the collection contain correspondence. In fact, "Fan Mail" and "Personal Business Papers" are almost entirely correspondence, but even "Photographs" and "Writings" contain a certain amount--although the letters in the former are primarily addressed to members of Bernstein's staff, and letters in the latter include drafts of letters by Bernstein, some of which were never sent, and originals of letters sent by Bernstein (some of which appear to have been retrieved for inclusion in his book Findings.)

Bernstein's family and staff were exceptional custodians of the correspondence prior to its coming to the Library and most of the organization and identification of materials was theirs. They have also always been responsive to questions that have come up during the course of our work, especially an attempt to identify as much of the unsigned, illegible, or sans surname signatures as possible. Special gratitude is due to Albert Tucker, who performed most of the work on the correspondence in the collection and prepared the following inventory.

Arrangement is alphabetical by correspondent or subject.

BOX 69-196Writings, 1928-91

The "Writings" series of the Leonard Bernstein Collection, is a very broadly construed grouping of documents. Spanning the years from 1928 to 1991 (when an article was published posthumously in the New York Times), these writings might also be characterized as non-music manuscripts (although many items are typescripts as opposed to manuscripts, and some items--notably transcripts of interviews--were not really "written" at all).

The Writings series is divided into four subseries. First is the general chronological list, which includes the bulk of the writings, arranged in date order--by date of creation, publication, performance, or presentation, or by some approximate date. This is followed by the Young People's Concerts scripts (television scripts are chronologized by air date,) other television scripts, and TelePrompTer scripts. The final two subseries are the Norton Lectures and the Book Materials. The Norton Lectures includes not only Bernstein's manuscript notes, draft scripts, and annotated typescripts, but also notes and outlines of others who helped prepare the lectures, research materials, television production materials, TelePrompTer scripts, and correspondence relating to the production and distribution of the lectures on video. The Book Materials includes typescripts, musical examples, planning materials, correspondence with the publisher, and publisher's proofs. The contents within the various subseries are not exclusive. For example, the general chronological list contains Norton Lectures material, book materials and television scripts.

Where titles exist, they appear as the initial entry in the "Title/Description" field in this guide. Either in place of, or following, a title, but always in square brackets, is a description of the type of work represented--article, poem, lecture, etc.--including any information known about where or for what or whom items were created, published or presented, and often a brief topic description. Most descriptions are self-explanatory; one exception is "imaginary conversation," a term created by Bernstein to describe a particular type of article. The Writings contain sketches and/or complete drafts for twelve imaginary conversations, of which, apparently, only three or four were published. This guide can most successfully be used by those able to access it by computer and do word searches. In that way, for instance, the fifteen writings with titles or descriptions that include "Mahler" can be found in a matter of seconds. Searching for "Tanglewood" will garner the researcher not only writings about Tanglewood, but writings on various topics presented at Tanglewood.

In terms of discrete works, the largest number of items in the Writings series is contained in the general chronological list; however, in terms of the amount of space required to house material, the various groupings are roughly proportionate. For example, while the total of 37 boxes of material described in the general listing represents hundreds of titles, the 39 boxes of Norton Lectures material represent a total of six lectures. The Writings includes notes, drafts, and completed works intended for presentation before a public readership or audience: music reviews and other articles; program and liner notes; speeches and statements; lectures; concert preview/explanatory scripts; TV scripts and other TV or radio commentary; books authored by Bernstein; introductions and prefaces to books by other authors; lyrics; etc.

The general chronological list also contains manuscripts or typescripts intended for more limited readerships: school and extra-curricular work while at Boston Latin School or Harvard College (short stories, essays, work assignments and exams, college thesis, music reviews); letters, birthday poems, memos, and recommendations, written for family, friends, colleagues, proteges, or staff; and poems and poem translations, crossword puzzles and games, a sleep record from January and February 1983, annotated texts or books, and marginal notes, written by Bernstein for his own use.

Some anomalies will be found in the Writings series, among which are the following: interviews; a Charlie Harmon phone list; a transcript of a speech by Joachim Kaiser at the bestowal of the Karl Amadeus Hartmann Medal on Bernstein in 1986; a list of Bernstein's copyrighted works; and a catalog for the Museum of Broadcasting's 1985 exhibition concerning Bernstein's television work. These maladaptations are housed in the Writings series both because this was where they were filed prior to coming to the Library, and because they provide important direct (interviews) or indirect (Joachim Kaiser speech) testimony concerning Bernstein's life and how it touched the lives of others. Since this is what we hope the Writings series conveys anyway, it seems not unreasonable to accept a few black sheep within its fold.

A final caveat: Because a certain classification of material is typically found in the Writings, please do not assume that all such items in the Bernstein Collection are to be found here. One should, for example, also peruse the Amberson Business Papers series, which is known to contain, inter alia, interviews, recommendations, correspondence (personal), and speeches.

Series is divided into four subseries.

BOX 199-318

Photographs, 1915-93

Most of the photographs in the Bernstein Collection are organized in boxes, chronologically by years--one to three boxes per year. These photos can be accessed chronologically, or by using the name and subject indexes at the back of this section of the guide.

A designation (44A/012) may represent either an individual photograph, or a collection of images. When it represents multiple images, it is usually either a collection of snapshots, a group of photographs affixed to a single piece of paper, or even two 8"x10"s affixed to either side of a piece of paper. In some cases there may be additional copies, often enlarged, of one or more of these individual images included in the group --these all may share the same designation.

Designations are primarily in two sections. In most cases, the first two characters represent the year of the photograph(s), i.e. "56" is 1956, and "87" is 1987. In cases where an exact year is unknown, but a decade is either known or assumed, the second character is an "X", i.e. "6X" represents a period between 1960 and 1969. "MD" stands for "Mixed Dates," meaning, photographs that cover a range of years and/or decades and must be kept together (usually because they are affixed in a photo album); and "ND" stands for "No Dates known," meaning that there is not enough information to even determine the likely decade when the photograph(s) was taken. The other "odd" designations are: "HC" for holiday cards, "LB" for a collection of portraits of Bernstein sent out on request, "FB" for a collection of portraits and production shots of Felicia, "10MS" for Mass production shots, "FD" for photographs used or considered for Findings, and "NL" for images used in the Norton Lectures. The third character is usually the letter "A". This signifies that the photograph(s) is/are kept in folders either singly or in a small group with other photographs. When the letter is a "B," "C," "D," or "E" it signifies a photo album. Photo albums are also bolded, and do not have individual numeric designations for each image. When the third letter is an "S," it signifies that the item is in one of the two boxes of slides.

The second section --following the slash (/) --is a number representing either a specific image or a group of images. Hence, "73A/027" is the 27th image (or group of images) from the year 1973. "73B" represents any image included in the first photo album from 1973.

Some designations have an additional field of information. These include "[Ov]" for "Oversize," "[+Ov]" indicating a photograph that is both included in the regular size photographs and in the oversize photographs, and "[Ov1]," "[Ov2]," etc. representing the various degrees of oversize material.

There are two sections to the index for the photographs. The first is a name index, the second is an index of places, events and activities. Leonard Bernstein is not listed in the first index as most of the photographs in the collection include him. In the second index, the majority of activities are listed under "Bernstein, Leonard." One activity not included is conducting. On average there are dozens of photographs in every year of Bernstein conducting, so for the researcher wishing conducting shots it is recommended that they determine the year/age they wish the shots for and look through the photographs for that year. Activities are alphabetized by the noun when they exist. For instance, "playing the drums" is alphabetized under "d," whereas "swimming" is alphabetized under "s".

A large number of photographs came with identification written on the back, margins, or included with various forms of notes. These were the basis for most of the information in the indexes. However, it must be noted, as useful as this information was, we know that this information is not infallible. For instance, we encountered a number of photographs where copies of the exact same photograph were marked with different dates, different locations, and the identification of the people in the photographs included variant spellings. We made reasonable attempts to determine correct spellings.

Many photographs are not represented in either of the indexes simply because there was no identifying information. When one photograph is listed in an index, it is not unusual for there to be other photographs near it that may be from the same venue, but the photographs contained no identifying information so they were not included in the index. So, it may be worth the researcher's time to look at the photographs in surrounding folders to the one you have identified as containing the desired subject matter.

In most cases, where a place as noted in the photograph has no identifying features, for instance a portrait taken with a plain background, but notated as having been taken in "St. Louis," that photograph would be unlikely show up in the index under "St. Louis," unless it was within a range of other photographs that included recognizable locations in "St. Louis." Similarly, if a photograph is notated that Bernstein is conducting the Vienna Philharmonic, but no orchestra members are visible in the photograph, the photograph is not likely to appear in the index next to "Vienna Philharmonic."

A few folders are empty and are marked "[photo missing]." These are cases where the Library was provided with notebooks of photocopies of photographs for a given year, but the original photograph never turned up in the collection after the Library received it. The assumption is that these photographs were loaned out by the Bernstein organization, but they were not returned by the time the collection was given to the Library. We hope, in time, that these photographs will be found and inserted in their proper place. Until that time, they are not represented in either of the indexes.

Arrangement is by chronological by date.

PERMISSIONS/PRINTS/COPYING Photocopies may be made of photographs for reference purposes only. Before any duplicates or negatives can be made by the Library's Photoduplications Service, we require the written permission of the copyright holder -- usually the photographer or their estate. For permission to copy family photos and snapshots, we require the written permission of Amberson, Inc. For other photographs, where no photographer information is provided, or visible (i.e. photographs affixed to paper, in albums, etc.) we require no permissions. Currently, the turnaround time for prints is four to six weeks. Number of items: 17,439

BOX 321-327Datebooks, 1944-1990

There are over fifty of Bernstein's datebooks from 1944 to 1990, virtually covering his entire professional career. In some instances there is more than one for the same time period. The datebooks have annotations in many hands, though primarily either those of Bernstein or his secretary Helen Coates.

Arrangement is chronological by date.

BOX 328-29Schedules, 1983-92

Over ninety schedules regarding Bernstein's travel, conducting, recording and other appearances between October 1983 and December 1992. Some schedules may cover the same time period as plans were changed or refined.

Arrangement is chronological by date.

BOX 330-31Address Books and Message Books, 1988-89

There are six address books that appear to cover different periods of time and may have been used at various locations. One address book includes only foreign addresses. In addition, there are three Telephone Message Books for the period 1988 to 1989.

Arrangement is chronological by date.

BOX 332-34Iconography

The iconography in the Bernstein collection includes cartoons, pen and ink drawings, watercolors, prints, caricatures, and other items of a particularly visual nature. Many of the works are representations of Bernstein or of a production conducted by Bernstein.

Arrangement is by format.

BOX 335-386Programs, 1925-91

The Programs series contains approximately 2,800 programs (including duplicates) dating from 1925 through 1993. It should be noted, that many significant programs may be found only in the Scrapbooks--particularly those dating through the 1950's. While most of the programs in the collection are the standard "concert programs," the Programs series also contains programs to events, including: memorial services, films, stage works, radio or television series, tributes, festivals, graduation ceremonies, award ceremonies, recordings, etc. In general, programs have been organized in date order. In the case of festivals and events that cover a range of dates we have used the earliest date. Some of the programs are for events which Bernstein attended but did not participate in.

At the end of the Programs series are bound collections of programs and typed lists or computer printouts listing Bernstein's concert programs. Some of these items appear to have been compiled and annotated by Bernstein's assistant, Jack Gottlieb. Additional items filed among the general chronology of programs include: tour itinerary schedules, clippings regarding specific programs, publicity materials, theatre and orchestra publications, and invitations.

Arrangement is chronological by date.

While it is hard to provide rules for what programs can or cannot be copied without the written permission of a copyright holder, the following information--provided by the General Counsel's Office of the Copyright Office--should be helpful. Published items (which we would consider most programs to be) with no copyright notice and a publication date prior to 1978 are in the public domain. A program published between 1978 and 1989 without a copyright notice is probably in the public domain. Programs that were copyrighted more than 75 years ago are in the public domain; and, if they were copyrighted, but not renewed within 28 years prior to 1978 they are in the public domain. After 1989 copyright notices became optional. Programs which are under copyright may still be copied to the degree covered by "fair use." In general, copying factual information from a program (such as the pages that list what works are being performed, song titles, listings of performers, designers, etc.) is more likely to be covered by "fair use" than articles or program notes.

Correspondence, 1932-90

30 linear feet of shelf space, 15,759 items

The correspondence in the Leonard Bernstein Collection consists of more than 15,500 individual items from over 3,300 individuals or organizations. All material from or relating to a correspondent is housed in its own folder(s) and arranged chronologically. Undated material is filed at the back. Each identifiable correspondent is indexed alphabetically in the guide along with the date range and the number of items in the folder(s). Unidentified correspondence is at the end. Most of the correspondence falls between the dates of 1932, the year of Bernstein's engagement of Helen Grace Coates as piano teacher at the age of 14, and 1990, the year of his death.

In addition to such standard items as letters, postcards, telegrams, and birthday and greeting cards, the correspondence also contains the occasional photograph, music manuscript, diary, appointment book, script, collection of poems, or art work (e.g., sketches). No attempt was made to indicate all the non-standard items where they occur, but on occasion a parenthetical note will be found regarding such novelties.

Most of Bernstein's individual correspondents are filed under their own names. However, a few are organizational or business names, and other letters are topic-related, i.e. Candide. These designations pre-date the Library of Congress Music Division's possession of the material. Some letters from prominent individuals were moved from the "fan mail" collection to "correspondence" prior to the presentation of the collection to the Library.

A significant amount of the correspondence includes Bernstein's responses to the letters he received. These typically appear in the form of handwritten or typed replies in the margins or on the backs of the letters received by Bernstein. The handwritten responses are either in LB's hand or that of Helen Coates in her capacity as secretary. There is no indication in this guide where such responses occur. In some cases, however, Bernstein's actual outgoing letters --either originals, or photocopies --are present, either filed chronologically within the correspondence, or collected separately in their own folder. In both instances, parenthetical notes indicate the filing method (for example, Burton Bernstein, Felicia Bernstein, Helen Coates, Serge Koussevitzky). After Bernstein's death, Charlie Harmon and Harry Kraut contacted people likely to have received letters from Bernstein and requested photocopies of that correspondence. These photocopies are filed at the end of each correspondent's folder. The only clue to the location of these items in the correspondence is found by noting the date spans--as these items were solicited via a letter dated post-1990 (also included)--most date spans which exceed 1990 indicate the presence of photocopied Bernstein correspondence.

In addition, the Library included two other sets of material in the Correspondence: over 300 condolence letters sent to Bernstein after the death of his father, referenced under Bernstein, Samuel J.; and over 700 letters, referenced under Coates, Helen, primarily from Bernstein to Coates, but also from various other persons to Coates, from Coates to Bernstein, and from Bernstein to several other persons. In the case of Helen Coates, each of the correspondents found in her file is listed parenthetically following her name in the guide with cross-references listed under the correspondent. For Samuel Bernstein's condolence letters, no cross references are provided.

Many other series in the collection contain correspondence. In fact, "Fan Mail" and "Personal Business Papers" are almost entirely correspondence, but even "Photographs" and "Writings" contain a certain amount--although the letters in the former are primarily addressed to members of Bernstein's staff, and letters in the latter include drafts of letters by Bernstein, some of which were never sent, and originals of letters sent by Bernstein (some of which appear to have been retrieved for inclusion in his book Findings.) Bernstein's family and staff were exceptional custodians of the correspondence prior to its coming to the Library and most of the organization and identification of materials was theirs. They have also always been responsive to questions that have come up during the course of our work, especially an attempt to identify as much of the unsigned, illegible, or sans surname signatures as possible. Special gratitude is due to Albert Tucker, who performed most of the work on the correspondence in the collection and prepared the following inventory.

Arrangement is alphabetical by correspondent or subject.

Writings, 1928-91

9,256 items, 130 boxes

The "Writings" series of the Leonard Bernstein Collection, is a very broadly construed grouping of documents. Spanning the years from 1928 to 1991 (when an article was published posthumously in the New York Times), these writings might also be characterized as non-music manuscripts (although many items are typescripts as opposed to manuscripts, and some items--notably transcripts of interviews--were not really "written" at all).

The Writings series is divided into four subseries. First is the general chronological list, which includes the bulk of the writings, arranged in date order--by date of creation, publication, performance, or presentation, or by some approximate date. This is followed by the Young People's Concerts scripts (television scripts are chronologized by air date,) other television scripts, and TelePrompTer scripts. The final two subseries are the Norton Lectures and the Book Materials. The Norton Lectures includes not only Bernstein's manuscript notes, draft scripts, and annotated typescripts, but also notes and outlines of others who helped prepare the lectures, research materials, television production materials, TelePrompTer scripts, and correspondence relating to the production and distribution of the lectures on video. The Book Materials includes typescripts, musical examples, planning materials, correspondence with the publisher, and publisher's proofs. The contents within the various subseries are not exclusive. For example, the general chronological list contains Norton Lectures material, book materials and television scripts.

Where titles exist, they appear as the initial entry in the "Title/Description" field in this guide. Either in place of, or following, a title, but always in square brackets, is a description of the type of work represented--article, poem, lecture, etc.--including any information known about where or for what or whom items were created, published or presented, and often a brief topic description. Most descriptions are self-explanatory; one exception is "imaginary conversation," a term created by Bernstein to describe a particular type of article. The Writings contain sketches and/or complete drafts for twelve imaginary conversations, of which, apparently, only three or four were published. This guide can most successfully be used by those able to access it by computer and do word searches. In that way, for instance, the fifteen writings with titles or descriptions that include "Mahler" can be found in a matter of seconds. Searching for "Tanglewood" will garner the researcher not only writings about Tanglewood, but writings on various topics presented at Tanglewood. In terms of discrete works, the largest number of items in the Writings series is contained in the general chronological list; however, in terms of the amount of space required to house material, the various groupings are roughly proportionate. For example, while the total of 37 boxes of material described in the general listing represents hundreds of titles, the 39 boxes of Norton Lectures material represent a total of six lectures. The Writings includes notes, drafts, and completed works intended for presentation before a public readership or audience: music reviews and other articles; program and liner notes; speeches and statements; lectures; concert preview/explanatory scripts; TV scripts and other TV or radio commentary; books authored by Bernstein; introductions and prefaces to books by other authors; lyrics; etc.

The general chronological list also contains manuscripts or typescripts intended for more limited readerships: school and extra-curricular work while at Boston Latin School or Harvard College (short stories, essays, work assignments and exams, college thesis, music reviews); letters, birthday poems, memos, and recommendations, written for family, friends, colleagues, proteges, or staff; and poems and poem translations, crossword puzzles and games, a sleep record from January and February 1983, annotated texts or books, and marginal notes, written by Bernstein for his own use.

Some anomalies will be found in the Writings series, among which are the following: interviews; a Charlie Harmon phone list; a transcript of a speech by Joachim Kaiser at the bestowal of the Karl Amadeus Hartmann Medal on Bernstein in 1986; a list of Bernstein's copyrighted works; and a catalog for the Museum of Broadcasting's 1985 exhibition concerning Bernstein's television work. These maladapt are housed in the Writings series both because this was where they were filed prior to coming to the Library, and because they provide important direct (interviews) or indirect (Joachim Kaiser speech) testimony concerning Bernstein's life and how it touched the lives of others. Since this is what we hope the Writings series conveys anyway, it seems not unreasonable to accept a few black sheep within its fold.

A final caveat: Because a certain classification of material is typically found in the Writings, please do not assume that all such items in the Bernstein Collection are to be found here. One should, for example, also peruse the Amberson Business Papers series, which is known to contain, inter alia, interviews, recommendations, correspondence (personal), and speeches.

Series is divided into four subseries.

General Writings Chronology

The General Writings Chronology is a list that includes the bulk of the writings, arranged in date order--by date of creation, publication, performance, or presentation, or by some approximate date. Where titles exist, they appear as the initial entry in the "Title/Description" field in this guide. Either in place of, or following, a title, but always in square brackets, is a description of the type of work represented--article, poem, lecture, etc.--including any information known about where or for what or whom items were created, published or presented, and often a brief topic description. Folders often contain various versions of a work from manuscripts to annotated typescripts.

Arrangement is chronological by date.

Photographs, 1915-93

17,439 items

Most of the photographs in the Bernstein Collection are organized in boxes, chronologically by years--one to three boxes per year. These photos can be accessed chronologically, or by using the name and subject indexes at the back of this section of the guide.

A designation (44A/012) may represent either an individual photograph, or a collection of images. When it represents multiple images, it is usually either a collection of snapshots, a group of photographs affixed to a single piece of paper, or even two 8"x10"s affixed to either side of a piece of paper. In some cases there may be additional copies, often enlarged, of one or more of these individual images included in the group --these all may share the same designation.

Designations are primarily in two sections. In most cases, the first two characters represent the year of the photograph(s), i.e. "56" is 1956, and "87" is 1987. In cases where an exact year is unknown, but a decade is either known or assumed, the second character is an "X", i.e. "6X" represents a period between 1960 and 1969. "MD" stands for "Mixed Dates," meaning, photographs that cover a range of years and/or decades and must be kept together (usually because they are affixed in a photo album); and "ND" stands for "No Dates known," meaning that there is not enough information to even determine the likely decade when the photograph(s) was taken. The other "odd" designations are: "HC" for holiday cards, "LB" for a collection of portraits of Bernstein sent out on request, "FB" for a collection of portraits and production shots of Felicia, "10MS" for Mass production shots, "FD" for photographs used or considered for Findings, and "NL" for images used in the Norton Lectures. The third character is usually the letter "A". This signifies that the photograph(s) is/are kept in folders either singly or in a small group with other photographs. When the letter is a "B," "C," "D," or "E" it signifies a photo album. Photo albums are also bolded, and do not have individual numeric designations for each image. When the third letter is an "S," it signifies that the item is in one of the two boxes of slides. The second section --following the slash (/) --is a number representing either a specific image or a group of images. Hence, "73A/027" is the 27th image (or group of images) from the year 1973. "73B" represents any image included in the first photo album from 1973. Some designations have an additional field of information. These include "[Ov]" for "Oversize," "[+Ov]" indicating a photograph that is both included in the regular size photographs and in the oversize photographs, and "[Ov1]," "[Ov2]," etc. representing the various degrees of oversize material.

There are two sections to the index for the photographs. The first is a name index, the second is an index of places, events and activities. Leonard Bernstein is not listed in the first index as most of the photographs in the collection include him. In the second index, the majority of activities are listed under "Bernstein, Leonard." One activity not included is conducting. On average there are dozens of photographs in every year of Bernstein conducting, so for the researcher wishing conducting shots it is recommended that they determine the year/age they wish the shots for and look through the photographs for that year. Activities are alphabetized by the noun when they exist. For instance, "playing the drums" is alphabetized under "d," whereas "swimming" is alphabetized under "s".

A large number of photographs came with identification written on the back, margins, or included with various forms of notes. These were the basis for most of the information in the indexes. However, it must be noted, as useful as this information was, we know that this information is not infallible. For instance, we encountered a number of photographs where copies of the exact same photograph were marked with different dates, different locations, and the identification of the people in the photographs included variant spellings. We made reasonable attempts to determine correct spellings.

Many photographs are not represented in either of the indexes simply because there was no identifying information. When one photograph is listed in an index, it is not unusual for there to be other photographs near it that may be from the same venue, but the photographs contained no identifying information so they were not included in the index. So, it may be worth the researcher's time to look at the photographs in surrounding folders to the one you have identified as containing the desired subject matter.

In most cases, where a place as noted in the photograph has no identifying features, for instance a portrait taken with a plain background, but notated as having been taken in "St. Louis," that photograph would be unlikely show up in the index under "St. Louis," unless it was within a range of other photographs that included recognizable locations in "St. Louis." Similarly, if a photograph is notated that Bernstein is conducting the Vienna

Philharmonic, but no orchestra members are visible in the photograph, the photograph is not likely to appear in the index next to "Vienna Philharmonic."

A few folders are empty and are marked "[photo missing]." These are cases where the Library was provided with notebooks of photocopies of photographs for a given year, but the original photograph never turned up in the collection after the Library received it. The assumption is that these photographs were loaned out by the Bernstein organization, but they were not returned by the time the collection was given to the Library. We hope, in time, that these photographs will be found and inserted in their proper place. Until that time, they are not represented in either of the indexes.

Arrangement is by chronological by date.

PERMISSIONS/PRINTS/COPYING Photocopies may be made of photographs for reference purposes only. Before any duplicates or negatives can be made by the Library's Photoduplications Service, we require the written permission of the copyright holder -- usually the photographer or their estate. For permission to copy family photos and snapshots, we require the written permission of Amberson, Inc. For other photographs, where no photographer information is provided, or visible (i.e. photographs affixed to paper, in albums, etc.) we require no permissions. Currently, the turnaround time for prints is four to six weeks. Number of items: 17,439 prints; drawings, including 7 "Scenes from Der Rosenkavalier"; watercolors; highly illustrated/decorated birthday cards; artists' brochures. Most items are of or refer to Bernstein.

The Programs series contains approximately 2,800 programs (including duplicates) dating from 1925 through 1993. It should be noted, that many significant programs may be found only in the Scrapbooks--particularly those dating through the 1950's. While most of the programs in the collection are the standard "concert programs," the Programs series also contains programs to events, including: memorial services, films, stage works, radio or television series, tributes, festivals, graduation ceremonies, award ceremonies, recordings, etc. In general, programs have been organized in date order. In the case of festivals and events that cover a range of dates we have used the earliest date. Some of the programs are for events which Bernstein attended but did not participate in.

At the end of the Programs series are bound collections of programs and typed lists or computer printouts listing Bernstein's concert programs. Some of these items appear to have been compiled and annotated by Bernstein's assistant, Jack Gottlieb. Additional items filed among the general chronology of programs include: tour itinerary schedules, clippings regarding specific programs, publicity materials, theatre and orchestra publications, and invitations.

Arrangement is chronological by date.

While it is hard to provide rules for what programs can or cannot be copied without the written permission of a copyright holder, the following information--provided by the General Counsel's Office of the Copyright Office--should be helpful. Published items (which we would consider most programs to be) with no copyright notice and a publication date prior to 1978 are in the public domain. A program published between 1978 and 1989 without a copyright notice is probably in the public domain. Programs that were copyrighted more than 75 years ago are in the public domain; and, if they were copyrighted, but not renewed within 28 years prior to 1978 they are in the public domain. After 1989 copyright notices became optional. Programs which are under copyright may still be copied to the degree covered by "fair use." In general, copying factual information from a program (such as the pages that list what works are being performed, song titles, listings of performers, designers, etc.) is more likely to be covered by "fair use" than articles or program notes.
